King Midas and the Golden Touch - Part 2

The king did not have much hope that his wish had been granted, because if it had been granted, his chariot would have turned to gold when he climbed aboard to go home, and it had not. Still, he was happy he had helped the satyr, and not just because the satyr was the servant of a god. Satyrs were not always treated kindly in the ancient Greek world because they looked rather different, being half man and half goat. When the king arrived back at his castle, he pulled out a chair to sit down at his table. The minute he touched it, the chair turned to gold. He touched the table. He touched a vase. As soon as he touched them, they turned to gold. King Midas raced through his castle. Everything he touched turned to gold! He was so happy. He shouted to his servants to cook him a feast in celebration!

His servants were very fond of King Midas. They knew he was foolish, but he was rather a dear. So they cooked and cooked and served him a feast. That's when the trouble started. Everything looked and smelled so good that King Midas did not wait for his daughter to show up for lunch. He reached out and grabbed a fistful of food. The food made quite a clatter when he dropped it back on the table in shock. It had turned to gold in his fist. He touched other food. Whatever he touched turned to gold. He tried leaning over and ripping a piece of meat with his teeth, but that did not help. The meat turned to gold in his mouth. The king's eyes filled with fear. He knew if he could not eat, he would starve. This was terrible and he didn't know what to do.

King Midas wandered sadly out to his rose garden. His little daughter was in the garden, picking roses. When she saw her father, she ran into his arms for a hug and turned to gold. King Midas hung his head and cried. As his tears fell on his precious roses they turned to gold, but the king did not care. He did not care about his roses or his gold or himself. Dionysus begged the king aloud, "Take my wish back! Please, take my wish back and save my daughter!"

One last time, the king's wish was granted.

- 1) Why did the King think the wish hadn't worked?
- 2) Write down three things that he turned to gold.

- 3) Do you think the King regretted his wish? Explain your answer.
- 4) Do you think King Midas was greedy?
- 5) The servants did not like King Midas. TRUE OR FALSE?
- 6) Find and write down a sentence that shows that the King was impatient for the feast.
- 7) How do you think he felt when his daughter turned to gold? Write down 3 words.
- 8) One last time, the king's wish was granted.
